Questions for Application and Fellowship

MY STORY

1. What locations have evoked praise in your heart to God? Where have you had your most profound moments of communion with the Lord and thankful understanding of His ways? In your living room? At church? In nature?

QUICK REVIEW

Psalm 65 is a Psalm of praise through and through. It’s hopeful, enthusiastic and filled with joy. It has no element of complaint or lament. It has no anxiety or troubled fear. This is from the same David who was at so many points tired, discouraged, and exhausted.

This Psalm holds great hope for those who have experienced spiritual depression. In it, David takes us to the three places of praise to the Living God, who is worthy of worship.

Read Psalm 65

Three Places to Praise God:

1. At the _____ (1-4)
Let’s give praise for God’s _____.
2. At the _____ (5-8)
Let’s give praise for God’s _____.
3. At the _____ (9-13)
Let’s give praise for God’s _____.

DIGGING DEEPER

1. In this Psalm, sin is presented as a living, active force alive in the human condition. How is it personified in these passages? As Christians saved by the grace of the cross, what steps do we need to take in view of the ongoing threat of sin?

Genesis 4:1-7

Psalm 65:3

Psalm 119:133

Romans 6:9-14

I Peter 2:11

2. What similarities do you see between Psalm 65:4 and Ephesians 1:3-14?
3. Where are you seeking satisfaction of life? In your house or God's house? What are your greatest longings? Can those things really satisfy?
4. God answers prayers "in righteousness." How does that affect your prayer life and the requests you make to God?
5. David gave thanks for the prolific season of harvest in Israel. These spurts of uncommon productivity under the Mosaic Covenant anticipated the return of Christ when the curse is lifted and the created realm will flourish. How is this depicted for us in Romans 8:18-25? How are these truths meant to encourage us?
